To Everyone - In having a wonderful vacation - today we are in Sutter Creek (about 1 hour from Stockton) where my niece has an antique shop - see X on lower right corner of card. In having lots of fun going in all the other antique & craft shops up & down the street not buying but I love to look! I haven't written any message for newsletter so guess I'll have to wait until next month.

One of Amador County's historical communities popular among visitors touring California's historical Gold Country.

Lakeside asks for funds for community projects

By Billie Sutherland 9-6-91
Daily Californian staff writer

LAKESIDE — Projects ranging from repair of an historic church's tower to expansion of the library were on the wish list Thursday night of Lakeside residents.

Community members attended a meeting to ask for a share of 1992-93 community development block grant funds from the county. The federal funds target the needs of low- and moderate-income neighborhoods and are intended to help eliminate urban blight.

No specific amount is set aside for Lakeside. All projects submitted to the county are to be evaluated before funding is allocated.

Eligible projects include street and sidewalk improvements, park and recreation facilities, improvements making public places more accessible for the handicapped and housing rehabilitation.

A total of $1 million of the county's $4.3 million, about the same as last year, is available for public projects in unincorporated areas during 1992-93, said Jane Takahashi, county community development coordinator.

Members of Lakeside's Friends of the Library and the Community Services Association bickered over how the money should be used, each claiming their projects were the most crucial.

Al Meyer of the Community

Services Association said Lakeside needs more downtown parking spaces. Expansion of parking at Lindo Lake Park already is slated this year using the federal funds.

"Bureaucratic boondoggling" is the reason more parking hasn't been created, since $350,000 has been spent on it so far, said Ken Horton of Friends of the Library.

Meyer said $350,000 was used for Vine Street improvements, but he said nearby streets need additional parking spaces, too.

A 1,800-square-foot expansion of the library is essential, Horton argued. Library supporter Charlotte Ackerman said the library, built in 1962, doesn't have any room for new books or adequate study space for students.

Jerry Fazio, who is in charge of the fund-raising foundation for the Boys' and Girls' Clubs of East County, requested block grant money to help pay for a gymnasium.

Fazio said the state has approved the design for the building. The proposed gym is to be built next to the Lakeside club on Lakeshore Drive.

"We definitely need the bell tower — that has quite a place in history," said Edna Kouns, treasurer of the Lakeside Historical Society.

The old Lakeside Community Church on Main Street needs front access for the disabled as well as its tower restored and refloored, Kouns said.

What projects will get how much will be considered by the county Board of Supervisors and voted on May 26, 1992. The board's public hearing on all block grant funding is May 5, 1992.(bfs)

WE TRY TO BE OPEN & RECEPTIVE

Open Mind and Heart

There are as many points of view as there are people in this world. Agreeing that there are certain points on which people may or may not agree is one of the most important attitudes we can develop.

By understanding and accepting the right of others to have opinions, we are open to their right to be unique individuals. When our friends are coping with a challenge, we are slow to give advice. Rather than telling them how we would resolve the problem, we encourage them to seek inner guidance and to find the way that is right for them. We pray for their highest good, remaining open to whatever form that good may take.

In all of our dealings with others, we show the compassion and understanding that we would like to receive ourselves. By allowing one another to think and act in ways that are guided by Spirit within, we are each free to become the very best that we can be.

Folks finding Success in golden years

You're never too old to be successful.

Just look at some famous oldies but goodies:

- Grandma Moses — painted at age 100.
- George Bernard Shaw — wrote plays at 93.
- Albert Schweitzer — ran his African hospital at 89.
- Thomas Edison — invented the dictaphone when he was 84.
- Ben Franklin — helped write the U.S. Constitution when he was 81.
- Colonel Sanders — began selling his famous fried chicken recipe when he was 66.

There's A New Recycler In Town

Bill Geraghty

Quality Recycling, a new redemption center on the corner of Riverview and Riverford Roads, is the idea of J. Dennis Reynolds and his brother Greg Reynolds.

They started the recycling center that buys aluminum cans; glass; plastic; milk containers; newspaper; cardboard; copper; radiators; brass and aluminum scrap.

Dennis had been in Lakeside since 1980 with Al's Autowrecking, recently moved to Escondido, and is very active with the Emmanuel Christian Church.

"We don't want to fill up landfills — so we do our part and take items like glass, newspaper and cardboard — that we actually lose money on," Dennis said.

A long-time employee, Chris Haverty, said; "We do a wonderful community service for the area, buying the cardboard and paper."

MARSHAL SCOTTY'S RESTORES REPLICA TRAIN FOR THE RAILROAD BUFFS — TOOT-TOOT

Marshal Scotty's is currently restoring and refurbishing the one-third size, near exact replica of the famous 4-2-4 C.P. Huntington, originally built in 1863, and now on display at the Southern Pacific Station at Sacramento, California.

Tom Ayers, on the park staff, is handling the finishing touches to the engine, painted bright red and blue, with brass and nickel fittings.

The original engine, unnamed when built in New Jersey early in 1863, for someone unable to pay, Collis P. Huntington of Central Pacific (now Southern Pacific) saw it and bought it for his railroad. The name and number "3" was painted on. It was dismantled and hoisted aboard a sailing ship, sent around Cape Horn, and arrived in San Francisco in March, 1864. Mark Hopkins, treasurer of CP paid the freight bill. After a riverboat trip to Sacramento, Charles Crocker of CP ordered it re-assembled, and the first day it ran was April 9, 1864.

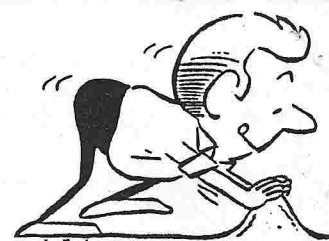

The Huntington, including built-in tender, was 29-ft. long; weighed 39,000-lbs. when loaded; had tractive power of 3,150-lbs.; and 235-hp at 50 m.p.h. Too weak to work in the mountains, the valves were rebuilt by order of Leland Stanford, President of CP, to help it pull light cars over the Sierra. But it could not do heavy hauling, so it was taken back to Sacramento to switch cars in the yards.

In 1871 it was repainted with a new number, "SP-1". The Huntington, well liked by Governor Stanford, was used to pull his special car. For 14 years he kept it in San Jose, but in 1888 it was returned to Sacramento for a new boiler. Even with that it could not compete with other locomotives, so in 1897, it was laid aside; and in 1900, ready to be broken up, it stood on the "dead track" behind the shop. Engines that arrived to be scrapped kept pushing it harder and harder, damaging it badly, but crowding it out of the hands of scrappers.

About 1904, it was repaired and repainted by a shop man named Joel Osgood Wilder, who loved the little engine; and he sat it on a platform at the end of his shop. In 1914, by order of SP, it was again repainted and sent to San Francisco for the "World's Fair." The once "worthless" engine had become valuable. It was shipped to Hollywood for the motion picture, "The Iron Horse" then later, under its own power, it took part in other gala events around America: The Chicago "Century of Progress Fair," the opening of new SP lines, the Martinez-Benicia bridge, Huey Long bridge and the Los Angeles Union Station.

After that, home again in Sacramento, the Huntington was set to rest in a city park facing SP station... a permanent monument.
